SUCCESSFUL TEACHING APPROACHES & METHODOLOGIES FOR ELT IN 2017

Compass takes pride in our efforts to research the most effective teaching methods and strategies for our titles. By engaging and communicating with teachers, academic coordinators, educational researchers, and top minds of this field, we are able to continuously stay at the forefront of ELT. To increase academic success, we have provided the collective information of successful approaches and methodologies that are represented in our titles for 2017.

FOUR STRAND THEORY

"The most important planning that a teacher can do is balancing opportunities for learning."

-Paul Nation-

The Four Strand Theory is an educational learning approach created by Paul Nation specifically designed for second language acquisition learners. The theory follows an equal balanced of 4 key strands; meaning-focused input, meaning-focused output, language-focused learning, and fluency development. Focused learning goals follow the strategy of trying to understand and gain knowledge then learning how to express a certain message. The ability to learn and use language features, such as grammar and vocabulary, is also incorporated to encourage language fluency and strengthening core communicative skills.

SCAFFOLDING

"Young writers need instruction. They do not improve their writing skills simply because teachers require them to write."

-C.S. Englertpage-

Scaffolding refers to the instructional techniques for students to progressively move towards a stronger understanding of the learning process and, ultimately, greater independence. The term describes the effects of a physical scaffold applied in the educational process; a teacher provides temporary successive support to help students reach higher levels of comprehension and skill acquisition. Once no longer needed, this support system is slowly removed. This process results in the gradually shifting of responsibility over the learning process from teacher to student.

STEALTH LEARNING

"When educators use games, they improve upon the traditional education system encouraging students to keep trying even when they lose and practice until they have mastered the content."

-Laura A. Sharp-

Stealth Learning is the method of disguising learning objectives through non-traditional tools, such as games and activities. It is designed to encourage students to have fun while learning. The approach focuses on enjoying the learning experience and not on overt, rigid, teaching practices. Stealth Learning stimulates the learners' interest in the subject enhancing higher memory retention, increasing cognition, and improving the developmental process.

TOTAL PHYSICAL RESPONSE (TPR)

"The instructor is the director of a stage play in which the students are the actors."

-James J. Ashe-

Total Physical Response (TPR) is a language teaching approach built around the coordination of speech and action; it attempts to teach language through physical (motor) activity. This approach is particularly suitable for low level learners or children, who are in the stage of learning basic words or phrases.

READER'S THEATER

"Reader's Theater motivates reluctant readers and provides fluent readers with the opportunity to explore genre and characterization."

-Susan Finney-

Reader's Theater is a fun and creative approach for learners to integrate reading, writing, listening, and speaking all in one activity. It turns literature into scripts to act out. Reading aloud, writing additional lines of dialog, and expressing the content as a play is the focus of this approach. Reader's Theater improves confidence and self-image by applying all communicative skills while working collaboratively.

EXTENSIVE READING

“Extensive Reading is not the best way. It’s the ONLY way.”

-Stephen Krashen-

INTENSIVE READING

“It is predicted that with its comprehensive training and rich exercises, [Intensive Reading] will continue to be an indispensable ELT course.”

-Weidong Yang-

HIGHER ORDER THINKING SKILLS

“To be truly effective, teachers... you must also prepare students for the learning they will have to do after they leave your classroom. Students who develop Higher Order Thinking Skills become life-long learners.”

-John Grischow-

CRITICAL THINKING

“Critical Thinking is that mode of thinking - about any subject, content, or problem - in which the thinker improves the quality of his or her thinking by skillfully taking charge of the structures of thinking and building up their intellectual standards.”

-Dr. Richard Paul-

CONTENT LANGUAGE INTEGRATED LEARNING (CLIL)

“Natural language acquisition occurs in context. Natural language is never learned divorced from meaning, and CLIL provides a context for meaningful communication to occur.”

-H.A. Curtainpage-

Extensive Reading involves reading a large quantity of enjoyable books which are at the right level. The benefits of extensive reading come when the learner reads regularly. There are two kinds of extensive reading; reading for language development and reading for fluency. When the reading materials are carefully chosen to suit the learners’ level, the reading practice allows the learners the continuous exposure to the target language they need in order to solidify and strengthen their language competence.

Intensive Reading involves learners reading in detail with specific academic aims and tasks. Intensive Reading serves to deepen cognitive processing through learning and practicing specific vocabulary and reading comprehension skills. The goal is to push oneself to build skills and strategies by taking on more difficult material in a clear, focused, and intentional manner.

Higher Order Thinking Skills (HOTS) is an educational concept based on the idea that learning requires different levels of cognitive processing. HOTS provides learners the capability of analyzing and processing new situations with existing information. By evaluating such experiences, students are developing problem solving skills, initiating different cognitive methods, and learn analysis skills such as critical thinking. In turn, these learners are then able to understand more of the world around them.

Critical Thinking is a must-have 21st century skill which refers to a learning approach that motivates students to use logic and evidence to analyze given information, find relationships among data, make judgment, and solve problems. Critical thinking makes learning more meaningful because the learners can explore ideas instead of only memorizing new information.

Content Language Integrated Learning (CLIL) is an approach to teaching the content of curricular subjects through a medium of non-native language. In a CLIL course, learners gain knowledge and understanding of the curricular subject while simultaneously learning and using the target language (English). Through CLIL-type lessons, students can learn content and a foreign language at the same time, thus achieving a dual-focused objective. In the CLIL approach, language is seen as a means to acquire a new knowledge, not an ultimate goal.

“Compass Publishing is proud that the titles in our catalog contain the most effective teaching methodologies so that our users have a variety of approaches available to them to fit all settings, classroom environments, and student levels.”

A message from the author, Anne Taylor:

“When I was writing this series, I had a group of kindergarten students with whom I spent a lot of time focusing on phonics. I could see they didn’t really know what it was all about, and this series was written with those students in mind. Sounds Great is an easy-to-use series designed to make phonics not only easier for children, but also for the teachers! I hope it brings smiles to your students’ faces.”

Compass Publishing Graded Readers

Graded readers from Compass Publishing include award-winning series designed to provide English-language learners enjoyable reading practice through original fiction, nonfiction and specially retold classic titles from around the world. English-language learners will enjoy developing their vocabulary acquisition, grammar application, reading fluency, and overall ability through use of these materials.

What are graded readers?

Graded readers, also known as leveled readers or language-learning literature, are short fiction and nonfiction books with audio that are carefully developed to meet the specific needs of English-language learners. They are designed to keep learners interested and motivated through tight control of the plot, vocabulary, and grammar, and have been specially written or adapted within a controlled vocabulary level and grammatical syllabus, with difficulty increasing through the levels.

Why use graded readers?

Graded readers help students to learn how to read confidently, fluently, and quickly. Reading fluently is a skill that must be learned and practiced to quickly and confidently process text for its meaning, not just as a language exercise. Developing the skill to read fluently will not only help students to learn and use English, it will help them to do better on tests and in other real-life situations that require reading in English.

Graded readers are a teaching and learning tool that uses a variety of ways to help students achieve specific English language results including:

- Fostering a more confident, motivated, and positive overall attitude toward studying English
- Automaticity (learning more vocabulary increasingly faster and with greater ease)
- Increasing comprehension and understanding of content through a variety of contexts
- Developing a more cohesive ability to intentionally control and manipulate grammar structures
- Cultivating a better command over speaking and writing skills
- Improving independent and social work, communication, cooperation, and work skills

Graded readers can be used in two ways:

Individual Reading Program

Creating and implementing an individual reading program allows students to become independent in their learning by borrowing books from the class library and reading them on their own. However, it also offers students the freedom to select titles that interest them, and to read at their own pace when and where they want.

Whole-Class Reading Program

Creating and implementing a whole-class reading program ensures all students have read the same graded reader. This method provides students with the opportunity to discuss the reader in a group setting which can promote team-building.

The Case of the Disappearing Newspapers

One evening while Katie was loading the dishwasher for her mother, the front doorbell rang. "See who that is, Katie," her mother called. She was in her bedroom, getting ready to go out for the evening.

"Coming!" Katie called as she hurried to open the front door. A boy of about 14 was standing there. Katie had never seen him before.

"Hi," Katie said. "Can I help you?"

"Are you Katie of Katie and TC Mystery Solvers?" the boy asked.

"I am."

"I'm Tom Dexter. I need your help."

"Then, you'd better come into my lab. I'll call TC. He lives next door. If he's free, he'll join us."

She called TC and then led the way into the garage through the side door. Tom followed her to where the lab was. Inside, there were a couple of canvas chairs and a stool.

22

"Sit down, Tom," Katie said, pointing to one of the chairs. She perched on the stool. Almost immediately, TC arrived.

"This is Tom," Katie said.

"Hi, Tom," TC said and sat in the other chair.

"How can we help you?" Katie asked.

"I do a paper route on my bike every morning," Tom explained. "I do all the streets in Kiama Valley Views—about forty houses. They are mostly big houses with long driveways. If there's a big enough mailbox on the gate, I put the paper in it. Otherwise, I just throw it over the gate."

"And leave it on the ground for the owner to collect," TC said.

"Yes, that's what I'm supposed to do. The papers are wrapped in plastic so they don't get wet."

"So what's the problem?" Katie asked.

"Someone is stealing the papers. Not all of them, and not every day."

Reading Oceans™

Digital Reading Program

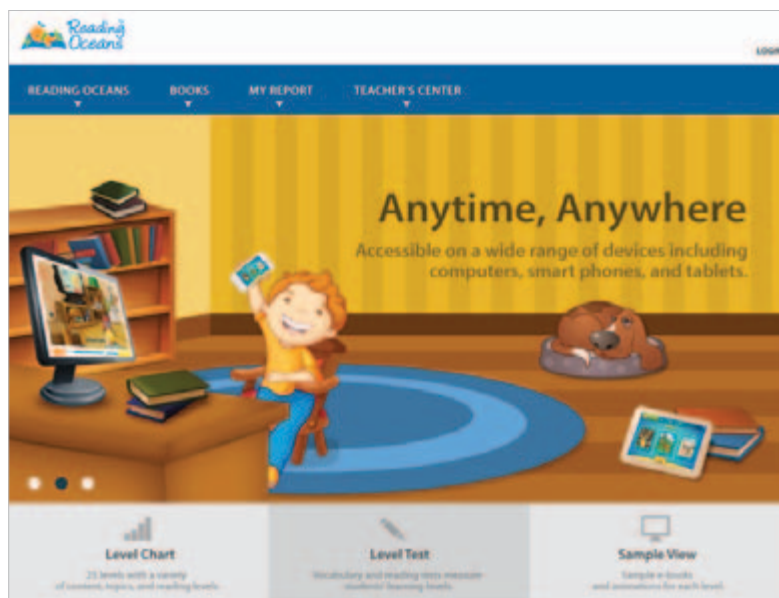

Reading Oceans™ is a digital reading program for English-language learners that offers a reading environment which empowers learners to select books based on their interest and skill level. Reading Oceans™ also provides administrators the tools to monitor and report student activity.

Mobile Device Compatible

Reading Oceans™ Level Test

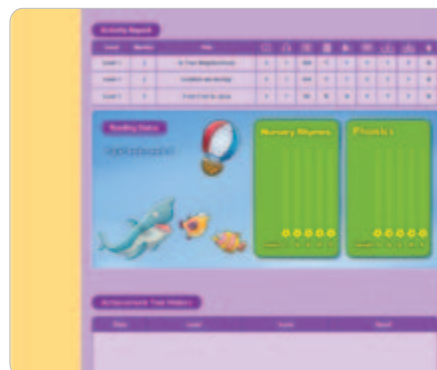

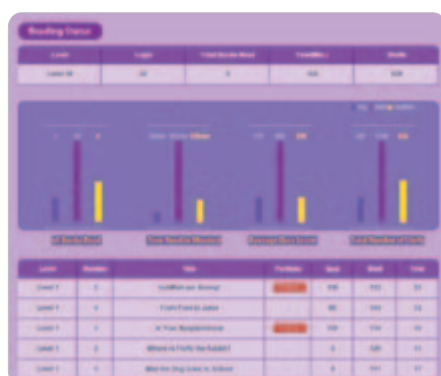

The level test is divided into two parts: a vocabulary test and a reading comprehension test. After a learner takes the internet-based level test, their results are immediately provided along with analytical information regarding the learners' reading level. The learner is then placed into an appropriate level and provided with recommended titles.

Teaching English to Young Learners is targeted at developing the potential of English language classroom teachers working with children. The teacher development book presents a collection of twenty modules focusing on different aspects of teaching young learners. Each module consists of an instructional model in the form of a picture story accompanied by captions and speech bubbles. A Key Vocabulary list summarizes the verbs, nouns, and other content words that appear in the story. Specific mention is also made of specialized or unusual usages. Each picture story is followed by a series of activities highlighting aspects of the language and methodology demonstrated within it. These activities provide teachers with opportunity to improve language proficiency and professional expertise by focusing on vocabulary review, grammar, listening, constructing and compiling teaching resources, and reflection.

- 20 modular lessons
- Illustrated lessons that clearly explain practical teaching techniques
- Ready-to-use language for classroom management and instructions
- Professional terminology that appears in context
- Practice activities, teacher-made resources, and reflection techniques
- Audio CD included
- Trainer's handbook available

What Should Every EFL Teacher Know?

Paul Nation

What Should Every EFL Teacher Know? is a must-have book which covers the most important information that a teacher of English as a foreign language should know. It focuses on practical issues such as how to teach listening, speaking, reading, and writing; how to teach pronunciation, spelling, grammar, vocabulary, and discourse; how to design lessons and courses; and how to solve teaching problems like large classes, a wide range of proficiency in a class, unmotivated students, and misbehaving students. The writer, Paul Nation, has been training teachers of English for over forty years and he has taught in Indonesia, Thailand, the United States, Finland, and Japan. He has written numerous books and articles about the teaching and learning of vocabulary, language teaching methodology, and curriculum design.

- Each chapter begins by clearly identifying the main ideas
- Headings throughout the text allow for clean, concise communication
- Figures, tables, and illustrations throughout the text allow readers to understand the techniques, data, and information visually
- Each chapter ends with a review which highlights the material that students should have learned
- Topics include: listening, speaking, reading, writing, pronunciation, spelling, grammar, vocabulary, lesson design, classroom management, and more

Chapter 1 What Should an English Teacher Do?

Main idea
 The main idea in this chapter is that the most important job of the teacher is to plan, and this planning involves applying the principle of the four strands. According to this principle, a well-planned course has four equal strands of learning from input (listening and reading), learning from output (speaking and writing), different language study, and fluency development. Each strand should get roughly the same amount of time in a course.

This book is written for teachers of English as a foreign language (EFL). I have also written a book directed to teachers of English as a second language (ESL). Teaching English as a foreign language occurs when the foreign language, English, is not widely used in the particular country outside of the classroom. The teaching situation determines these important characteristics of EFL.

1. The classroom activities may be the only significant source of input and language use for the learners. The teacher therefore has to play a strong role in the organization of learning.
2. Often, there is no clear learning need. English is learned because it is important, but not because the learners immediately need it for communication. There may be examination needs, but these are usually not very communicative needs.
3. The language is typically studied as a compulsory subject, so motivation and achievement may be low. Because of this, materials designed for ESL learners may not be suitable for EFL learners. ESL learners may have a higher level of proficiency and their materials designed for them are too uncontrolled and difficult for EFL learners.

Chapter 5 How Do You Teach Writing?

Main idea
 The main idea in this chapter is that learners should be self-supported when they write. This support can come from helping learners understand and practice the steps of the writing process, from helping learners write on their own, and from a range of supportive feedback. Fluency activities like 10-minute writing are useful for increasing the quantity that learners write and for increasing their writing speed.

Writing is one of the most difficult skills to teach, especially if the teacher is not a native speaker of English, because giving feedback on learners' written work requires recognizing errors. However, if the learners practice writing through a series of self-supported and graded activities, the marking load of the teacher can be reduced. The time-on-task principle applies to writing as much as it does to the other three skills. The more students write, the better they will become at writing.

The principle of the four strands also applies to the teaching of writing. Learners should do some writing which is at the level of their current knowledge (meaning-focused output). They should also do some deliberate study of aspects of the writing skill (language-focused learning). They should also do fluency development through writing. If the learners have to take tests that require writing in English, then fluency development in writing becomes very important for them. All skill strands (linked skills activities) can provide excellent preparation for writing. Quantity of writing is measured in the third part of the linked skills activities.

The steps described in Table 5.1 can become a focus for some teaching and/or practice. It is quite useful to see the steps in the writing process as making up a strategy that learners can bring to the writing. The steps can be expressed as a series of questions that learners ask themselves as they prepare for and do a piece of writing.

Here are some examples.

What am I writing to say in this piece of writing?
 What am I writing to?
 What are the main ideas that should be in my writing?
 How I organized these ideas in the most effective way?
 Is my writing correct and easy to read?

Let us now look briefly at how the learners can be helped to gain control of each of the steps of the writing process.

Deciding on the goals of writing can be helped by asking what is the main idea or the most important ideas that you want to communicate. Having a model of the reader can be helped by the using of a particular known person who would be a typical reader of what you are writing. This model of the reader can be helpfully writing with the reader asking need to you as you write and getting feedback from the reader as every text in their sentences are written. Gathering ideas can be helped by using topic frameworks, by brainstorming ideas in groups, by making writing the third step of a linked skills activity and by using information transfer diagrams.
